

in this issue:

Comment	3
New EU compensation law would jeopardise the no-frills airline sector ... and cripple the tourism potential of secondary cities
Profiles	4
Manchester	4
A decade of good growth – continuing into 2002 Tourism demand is still largely domestic Business travel more important than the leisure market Ireland and the USA generate more than 30% of international visitors Marketing Manchester focuses on leisure attractions
Luxembourg City	8
Tour de France attracts large crowds Business travel weaker than leisure demand in 2001 and 2002 Combining local efforts to promote the whole region
Tallinn	10
New data collection methodology distorts overall tourism trends Two-thirds of visitors are on holiday Increase in hotel capacity Modest growth expected in 2002
Montreal	12
Edging out its Canadian competition? Improved tourism performance attributed to promotional investments Overnight visitors account for 58% of arrivals but 90% of spending High satisfaction rating
Macau	15
Apparently strong growth in 2001 and 2002 but topline figures mask unhealthy dependence on the Chinese Only one-quarter of visitors stay overnight Majority of visitors are on holiday but gaming generates as much as 63% of total revenues
New York City	18
Domestic visitor count steady, but spending down by US$1 billion US capital harder hit than New York by recession and 11 September
Comparative Trends	20
City websites – What makes a good destination website? 20
World airports – Passenger traffic still down in most regions 21
European city statistics 22	